

Mattern's Plane Crashed In Siberian Wilderness

Fifty Miles From Obscure Village—Russian Government Takes Steps to Reach the Flier—Coastguard Cutter May Be Ordered to the Rescue.

(By the Associated Press)
Rescue parties seeking Jimmie Mattern directed their attention today to a point in the Siberian wilderness 50 to 60 miles west of the tiny village of Anadyrsk.

A wireless message from Anadyrsk, relayed through the coastguard cutter Northland to San Francisco, said the 28-year-old Texan had crashed 80 miles from there. Fragmentary reports received in Moscow indicated he went down 50 kilometers (50 miles) from the village.

Irving Friedman, backer of a rescue airplane expedition from New York, informed of Mattern's whereabouts, said William Alexander, chief pilot of the expedition, would carry on into Siberia.

The Texan who set out alone to fly around the world by air and who had been unreported three weeks, got a message through to civilization yesterday.

Sent by wireless from the Soviet station at Anadyrsk, July 5, it was received in Moscow yesterday. The Soviet government issued a communication confirming the message.

The Soviet government took immediate steps to reach the flier and care for his needs. Moscow ordered the officials of four eastern provinces to check definitely on his whereabouts and take care of his wants.

The United States Coastguard cutter Northland is in northern Pacific waters, although several hundred miles from Anadyrsk Bay, and may be ordered to assist in the flier's rescue.

The origin of the Mattern wireless indicates the flier was within 700 miles of American soil when he disappeared. Anadyrsk is 650 miles due west of the tip of Alaska. It is 1,800 miles northeast of Khabarovsk, whence he set out June 14—a matter of 16 hours flying. It is believed he was forced to land some distance from Anadyrsk and that three weeks were required to send his message, perhaps by peasant, to the wireless station.

Jimmie Mattern escaped unhurt in his forced landing in the Siberian wastes on his solo world flight.

Fragmentary details of the plight of the Texan filtering through today from the northern rim of the Pacific brought that reassuring word. Messages picked up in both Moscow and San Francisco, relayed by the Coast Guard Ship Northland, agreed on that point.

There was, however, disagreement as to the severity of the damage to Mattern's ship. As translated from Russian, as it was received in San Francisco, that message said the plane was "crushed to pieces," whereas the message picked up at Moscow by Tass (Russian News Agency) said the flier was forced down by engine trouble and added that a new motor would be supplied to enable Mattern to continue his round-the-world flight.

The message received at San Francisco indicated that Mattern had wandered through the Siberian wilderness during the three weeks that the world anxiously awaited news of his fate. It stated that he landed 80 miles west of Anadyrsk June 14, but was not found until July 5, the day he was taken to Anadyrsk.

Catskill Forests May Be Closed

Albany, N. Y., July 8 (AP).—Unless the serious fire hazard is relieved by rain, Lithgow Osborne, state conservation commissioner, has indicated that he may ask Governor Lehman to close the state forests in the Adirondack and Catskill regions.

"The department desires to permit vacationists free access to all sections of our mountainous areas," he said. "However, the first importance is the protection of our woodlands from destruction by fire."

A marked increase in the occurrence of fires or the development of serious fires may result in a request to Governor Lehman that the woods be closed until the danger is relieved by heavy rains.

Light rains have been reported in some sections, but the parched grounds have quickly absorbed the water, the department said, leaving the territory susceptible to fire after a short time.

Commissioner Osborne said he had instructed all rangers to remain constantly at their headquarters and directed all observers to exercise unusual vigilance.

Walther League

The regular monthly meeting of the Young People's Society will be held on Tuesday evening, July 11, at 8 o'clock. Important business will be transacting at this meeting which will demand the attention and consideration of every member and therefore the officers urge that all members of the society report at this meeting. Final plans for the coming District Summer Outing will be discussed Tuesday evening and sub-committee will also be appointed. The meeting of the District Executive Board was held on Saturday evening, July 1, at St. Paul's Church, Albany, New York. At this meeting Herman Monthie of Hudson, New York, was appointed to serve as Field Secretary for a period of two years. Fred Danescher, newly elected president of the district, announced the appointment of Miss Emelia Z. Zieke as Secretary of the District. Plans for another Summer Outing were discussed and final arrangements were left to the Executive Board. The place will, no doubt, be the White Sulphur Springs Hotel, East Berne, New York. Further details will be made known to local leaders through the medium of this column.

SHOKAN

Shokan, July 7—A party of young men rusticating at the Shokan House in the village center is made up of the following New York city residents: John Cammarota, A. Labuda, William Kaspar and William Budka. For recreation, the boys divide their time between the weir swimming pool below the Ashokan Dam and the municipal barnyard golf links near the corner. Martin Gulnack and family, together with their neighbors in the lower village, feel pretty badly over the loss of the Gulnack dog, which was killed by an automobile earlier in the week. The dog, an exception, was gentle and sociable animal, had endeared itself to the next door neighbors that one of them, in discussing the canine tragedy, declared that he had rather lost a hundred dollars than the companionship of that dog.

Robert Secor of Kingston is having the old barn in the rear of his country residence torn down. The barn was used by Mr. Secor for a stable for his delivery team during the years of his general storekeeping here. Elliott Didier of Flushing, L. I., who has spent a number of vacations with relatives here, will take up a course in business and finance at Cornell University next fall, according to his mother, Mrs. Alfred Didier, who returned to Flushing Thursday after spending a week in Shokan. Miss Ruth Didier, who accompanied her mother to Shokan, will remain with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Longyear of the west-end of the village, during the summer months.

On July 6, 1912, Mrs. Mary Eckert of Shokan, Mrs. Mary Bush of Brooklyn, and Mrs. Mary Merriew of Tongore were guests of their relative, Mrs. H. C. McLane at the home of the last named lady in Kingston. The occasion was the first time that the four relatives had ever met under one roof. Many farmers in cutting their hay have been surprised to find the timothy stems quite green for at least half their length, while sundry mixed grasses or "cow hay," are as green and lush as though a drought had not been sapping their vitality for months. Fields which appeared dried up from a little distance, upon closer examination are found to be in pretty good condition and perhaps are even "making hay" right along. A few farmers apparently were stampeded by the drought into cutting meadows that might well have waited a couple of weeks or more in the interests of better fodder.

The lively demand for bungalows and camps in the north reservoir section continues, scarcely a day passing without one or more city residents making inquiries along this line. Practically every house and habitable shelter in the twin village is either occupied or engaged for the season. Eggs have taken another little spurt in price, in a feeble effort to keep up with the hitting grain market. Nearby eggs now bring 21 cents a dozen and the poultrymen and farmers are paying $1.75 a hundred weight for scratch feed. Apparently there was more profit in the hen business early last winter when eggs sold for only twelve or fourteen cents and feed could be bought for $1.10 a bag.

A GENEALOGICAL WORK OF GREAT IMPORTANCE

The New York Genealogical & Biographical Record, 124 East 58th street, New York, N. Y., says in its July, 1933, edition:

The Book of Names, Especially Relating to the Early Palatines and the First Settlers in the Mohawk Valley, compiled and arranged by Vol. D. Mac Word, 1932. Octavo, cloth, indexed, pp. 292. Price $5.00. Address: The Enterprise and News, St. Johnsville, N. Y.

This important little book is an effort to list the early Palatines, particularly those of the Mohawk Valley, up to and including those who fought at Oriskany. While not a complete record of New York Palatines, the work is a worthy addition to the limited published records of the early German immigration. Among the more important lists are: The Koenigshaus records of the West Camp, Lutheran Church; A complete compilation of Governor Hunter's ration lists including London papers not before published; Various militia lists previous to the Revolution; The First, Second, Third and Fourth London Lists of Palatines and various Revolutionary Lists. Perhaps the most important among these lists is that made up of Governor Hunter's ration lists, June 1710, to September 1714, compiled from the records in London, which will definitely establish the presence in America, at an early date, of many Palatines previously credited to later immigration. Heartily recommended to historical and genealogical libraries.

Last night a number of friends of Soss and Zavern Melik and artists from Woodstock attended the opening of Soss Melik's exhibit of paintings which are being shown at the Hasbrouck House, 135 Green street. Among the paintings and pencil sketches exhibited were twenty-four oils, portraits, still life and landscapes, many of them of scenes familiar to Kingstonians. Possibly the outstanding still life, the type of painting for which Mr. Melik is best known, is the study of an arrangement of an old Assyrian bowl recovered from the grave of a warrior, with Persian prayer beads, a gold Hindu jug and a Persian oil lamp. As one enters the hall there is a study for a mural which this young artist will enter in the international contest at Rome, Italy, to be held there next year. This panel represents the legends connected with the life of Alexander the Great. Also of interest is a pencil sketch of Florio Chiallapi, photographed by the great singer, Mr. Melik is also displaying a design for a magazine cover which he was requested to do for the monks at St. Lazare, of Venice, Italy, for an art magazine which is published for them once in every ten years. The cover represents the three daughters of King Tigranes, first Christian ruler of Armenia. Zavern Melik, brother of Soss, is displaying nine oil paintings, landscapes and still life. The exhibit will be open to the public every night from 8 to 10 o'clock for the next two weeks, including July 21. Among the important out of town guests to visit his exhibit are Florio Chiallapi, portrait painter of New York; Max Panteleff, director of the Russian Grand Opera, New York; Mrs. Woodrow Wilson of New York; and Mrs. Henry Van Dyke, wife of the famous art critic. This afternoon James B. Atkinson, assistant art critic of the New York Tribune, will be in Kingston this evening to criticize Mr. Melik's work.

The question frequently has been asked why do people whose early life has been passed in Kingston so often wish to return here for important life events, marriage for instance. A recurrence of this question came to the mind of a Freeman man when at noon a couple of weeks ago, he strolled into the historic First Dutch Church and witnessed the wedding of Thomas Hoffman Clearwater and Miss Thelma Holloway. The bridegroom, a descendant of two of Kingston's oldest families, Clearwater and Hoffman, the tenth in direct lineal descent from two of the original settlers, Thomas Jacobus Clearwater and Martinus Hoffman, and the ninth in lineal descent to be married by a descendant of that great church, notwithstanding both he and his bride are residents of the city of New York and attendants of the Collegiate Dutch Church of that city. Appropriate too, was the blessing of Dr. Boere as the bride couple knelt before the far famed pulpit. Appropriate as well was the wedding breakfast served at the hotel, bearing the name of the great Governor General Stuyvesant who bought the land upon which the church and it stand three hundred years ago from the Esopus Indians. The great silk flag overhanging the elders seat under which three of his ancestors fought to establish and maintain American independence and civil and religious liberty. The maid of honor was the granddaughter of the noted Dr. Hull of Olive, one of the most famed of Ulster's physicians. The bride after cutting the wedding cake, handed over its distribution to Miss Bruce, the extremely capable head of the Stuyvesant's force of assistants who is the lineal descendant of that remarkable pioneer who organized the settlement of that portion of Ulster county now within the bounds of Delaware county, Colonel Zebulon Bruce.

Comic Song Has Outgrown Period of Wheezy Organ

In the older "old days," the rapid spread of the "comic" popular song was greatly hindered by the difficulty of properly performing "Little Brown Jug" and "Shoo Fly, Don't Bother Me" on the cottage organ, says a writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The introduction of the low-priced piano fostered this spirited though extremely frivolous type of minstrelsy. By the time that "Whoo Emma" swept the country, almost everybody who had a piano had acquired a square grand—"uprights" were not so well known. They came later, along with that pleasing ballad "Baby Mine" and also "Over the Garden Wall."

A celebrated circus clown spread "Where Did You Get That Hat?" all over the country.

Some time after that the one-night stands performed a similar office for "Down Went McGinty" and "The Band Played On." Then came the phonograph, and the listeners "had what they wanted," over and over again, in spite of the neighbors' screams. The radio poured forth a great flood of music, endless and varied, from "Tannhauser" to "Happy Days Are Here Again." Synchopation came in, numberless scores in rag-time and most of the words in a modified dialect.

The old cottage organ would have a stuttering and wheezy time with them. It was attuned to "gospel hymns" and was their deputed instrument.

Minting Gold for Friends Was His Mining Sideline

Christopher Bechtler, a native of the Duchy of Baden, emigrated to the United States in 1829 and the fruit of his subsequent labors has become the source of study for collectors ever since.

Being by trade a goldsmith, he soon journeyed to the mountains of North Carolina, having heard there was gold in the hills. Building a small cottage a few miles north of Rutherford, he immediately began an active business. Besides coining money for his neighbors, he mined for gold and silver and the semi-precious stones that are still to be found in the southern mountains. The inhabitants of the Carolinas and Georgia brought their gold to his mint for coining, just as they carried their wheat to the miller. The mint master weighed the rough gold in the presence of his customers and then entered it in his book, leaving a space for noting the assay. In a few days' time the coins were ready for delivery. Bechtler subtracted only a small percentage for his labor.

Some Acorns Edible

The general use of the acorn as an article of food has long since ceased, but back in ancient days it was an important article of food. In fact, it was considered that eating the acorn added years to a man's life and great strength to his muscles. Indians of the New England regions formerly ate the acorn of certain types of white oaks, while the sweet acorn of the California white oak is still ground into a coarse flour used in bread. Over in England the people of the rural communities bordering on the royal forests have the right every fall to turn their pigs loose in the woodlands in order that they may grow fat on the fallen acorns.—Washington Star.

THROUGH A Woman's Eyes
By JEAN NEWTON
CASH AND THE BRAINS OF THE COUNTRY

Not long ago two men in Paris searched out their brains for six million dollars. And some one remarked that with brain insurance he could make more and more money, the real wealth of the country could be estimated by consulting certain tables of the insurance companies. But could the real wealth of the country's brains ever be so estimated? The people who insure their brains would be those who are cashing in on their brains. For to insure something you have to be able to pay premiums. And it is a question of particular interest to women, to what extent the brains of the country have cash returns to prove their existence.

Among women, certainly, the percentage would be very small. For every woman who is free to produce concrete results, in cash or even what is termed achievement, for the amount of gray matter with which nature has endowed her, thousands must choose to live contingent lives in caring for the brains and bodies and present and future of their husbands and children.

The world does not and never will know what the brains of these women are worth. That doesn't matter, however; usually those close to them know. And if credit is not given publicly, nevertheless accurate in a specific more important to the warp and woof of the country's life than payment of gold.

Checks Are Stylish

Checks and double checks are definitely on Dame Fashion's approved list for this season. Helen Vincent, film actress, is shown wearing a modish brown-and-white checked ensemble with brown blouse and new three-quarter-length coat.

Height of Man Increasing

It has been estimated that the height of man is increasing. An official of the Institute of Juvenile Research, in Chicago, says: "The American boys of today are at least two inches taller than their grandpas were when they were boys." Measurements of the heights of over 1,000 boys of American-born parents were compared with the heights of boys measured over fifty years ago by another scientist. The increase in height may be attributed to the increasing knowledge of health and disease control. It is said.—Washington Star.

Ivory Not

Ivory is not the unlike seed of a South American palm, Phytolacca macrocarpa. It is as large as a hen's egg and contains a very hard endosperm which, under the name vegetable ivory, is used for turning and carving as for buttons. The name is also applied to the same seed of the palm Coccoloba americana, native to the Caroline islands.

said that 78 per cent of the Franklin manuscripts is in possession of this society. Among its other possessions which cannot be duplicated are a Gil-

Highlights and Shadows In The Lives of Fashionables

DID YOU KNOW THAT

Paris House of the artistically considered the importance of evening headpieces. In fact, a number of well known designers considered in the fall de la Mode held at the Ambassador, to which fashionable women were invited to wear little toques and bandeaus harmonizing with their evening gowns.

Fine velvet ribbons on sheer ground, a wave called summer velvet made one bandeau in white, to go with a dress of heavy white crepe and a jacket of the same velvet with black monkey epaulettes.
Like a number of the collures, this one consists of narrow bands around the back of the head between which pass the small curls of hair. Another model is made of bands of gold lame similarly disposed into a bandeau and accompanying a gown of the same fabric.

Another was of silver petals.

Necklines, it seems evident, are going even higher. There are lots of high draped effects worked in semi-scarf fashion, which the wearer adjusts more or less to suit her own taste, but the general effect is of a close-to-the-throat line.

There are many all-out and bit ideas in the new imports; while these are usually part of the construction of the dress—that is, they are seamed into the frock even though of a contrasting color.

The fairly short pullover sweater with wide ribbed band to finish it off at the hips has become such a sure-fire favorite that almost every other type of pullover that has entered in competition with it has hastily backed out. An attempt is made to give some prominence to the blouse of about the same short length but with only a narrow band at bottom and a belt at the normal waistline.

Some daytime costumes have rather a nautical air, expressed in sailor collars. One jacket costume in white crepe has a navy blue linen blouse with sailor collar, and another white costume has a sailor collar with gay red bands.

Mrs. Marshall Field wore with her dress of the new Chanel do-embroidered cotton and crash swagger coat, a beige crin hat trimmed with three ribbon cocardes on the crown in brown, red and beige.

Illustrated are two costumes of black satin. The model at the left adds a sheer and light touch in the white organdie jacket, that introduces folds of upstanding width at the shoulders.
The companion frock is done in black and white dotted satin, the

The costumes illustrated play up black and white for daytime. The costume at the left, after Dilkusha, is developed in black satin, and the revers and the plastronlike blouse are in linen, with tucks remaking a nice tailored accent.
Next is a costume done in black and white dotted crepe, with the greater part of the bodice in black crepe. The draped neckline, high waistline and brief cape sleeves are outstanding details.

The dress above is developed in black chiffon, very softly fashioned, with narrow tucks sometimes treated with saw-tooth edges adding to its sheer appeal. The cape shoulders and the big chin bow are details of importance.

The costume at extreme right is white and navy linen for the jacket that affects a nautical air in its sailor collar. A dash of red makes further attractive contrast.

This blouse of striped organdie at left, with marocain skirt in the color of the dark stripe of the organdie, was worn by Madame Rochas at the wore a Marie Guy toque of black organdie with flyaway bow at the top.

The other dress is of black crepe de Chine, with loose stiffened bands sleeve splits, and giving a flattery aspect to the silhouette.

Crowns Have All Sorts of Crushes

The hat illustrated above is a copy of Rose Descat. It is of grey felt with navy and beige belting trimming. The crown has a slight heret suggestion supplemented by folds and seams.

The other model, from Marie Alphonse, is of linen blue silk crepe with belting crown. The narrow blue belting ribbon and bows are typical of what is being worn in Paris now.

Necklines Creeping Up

A hint of necklines "creeping upon us" is discernible. In full view, the effect is very much the same as the base-of-the-neck cut, but it is the back that presents this higher aspect.

In both coats and dresses, there are examples of this idea. In coats or suit jackets, too, for that matter, it is in collarless finished necklines that the higher back appears. It is no affair of additional pieces or collars, but merely a higher cut to the neckline of the back itself. Or else stand-up collars, with turned-out open fronts, give another hint of this line.

In dresses, a little band collar that is no higher than ordinary, is cut deliberately at back, and a butterfly bow of fair size is perched back there at the highest point.

The "Corona House" catered to a large number of city guests over the

the Fourth with his sister, Mrs. Vic-

The electrical storm of last week did quite some damage. It struck

The new Heidelberg Cottage had a number of guests over the holidays.

Black Satin Occupies the Center of the Stage

New York—What a season this has been for blue. All shades of it.
Combining light blue with black was just naturally bound to follow the rage for turquoise and black or white which is now rather an old story. Aquamarine and black is another combination worthy of discussion because aquamarine is just over the borderline dividing blue and green, and is therefore not only popular among exponents of blue but of green as well. It has the added advantage of being a real color.

The dress sketched makes liberal and very interesting use of a heavily shade of blue which is aptly called "heaven" or, in other words, sky blue.

Those whose interest in fashion is always a season ahead feel confident that the autumn will still find us true blues, even though the usual autumnal shades will tempt some of us away from our old, and very tried and blue friends, of the blue family.

At the moment every one is so excited over satin, black especially, that one might easily think it had just been discovered. Most of us can remember, just a very few years back, when not to be dressed in black satin was to be a social outcast. It really is a most obliging sort of fabric. One may be very "drowsy" in black satin, or one may be even plain, but there is something subtle and sophisticated about it that cannot really be called sim-

Black satin makes such an effec-than the usual interest in jewelry will be felt this fall. Costume look more and more like the real thing in order to interest your black satin clad woman.

Crows Steal Eggs

During the months when young crows are being hatched and reared, the parents are persistent hunters for the young and eggs of wild birds and poultry. The bureau of biological survey states in a report on crow damage at a federal waterfowl sanctuary:
"The chief enemy of the ducks was the crow. This bird destroyed 35 per cent of the eggs."

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER
Willy Nilly went back to Puddle Middle with the little Ducks following him.

"Even if my horn honks all the time the car is traveling I'll simply have to use it if I'm to find Mr. and Mrs. Quacko," he said.

Christopher Columbus Crow was feeling much better. His foot was well enough so that the bandage could come off so Willy Nilly attended to the Crow and then got out his automobile Two-Ways with its horn that needed fixing.

The little Ducks climbed in, but as soon as the motor started the horn began to honk. Willy Nilly drove here and he drove there, and he couldn't find any trace of Mr. and Mrs. Quacko.

All the time his horn went honk-honking and almost all the time the little Ducks cried, "I don't see any sign of an accident," he said, trying to cheer up the little Ducks.

"Mama and Papa are lost," they moaned. Suddenly one of them shouted: "There's the car—over by that pond." And swimming in the pond were Mr. and Mrs. Quacko just as though nothing at all had happened. "We're coming right away," they quacked.

How did you ever get away over to this pond and what in the world happened?" asked Willy Nilly. "We have been so frightened," the little Ducks flew into the pond and their mother and father stroked them and said:

"There, there, Duck dears, do not weep any more. Mama and Papa are perfectly all right. We'll come along with you now and we'll tell you just what happened."

Troy, N. Y., July 5 (AP).—The Rev. Benjamin T. Trego, retired Episcopal clergyman and author of religious books, died here last night. The Rev. Trego and his wife came here to reside following his retirement five years ago from the pastorate of St. Paul's Church in Salem. He was a native of Philadelphia.

Watertown, N. Y., July 5 (AP).—Ruling the case should come under admiralty law and not under state compensation. Referee James P. Richardson yesterday refused to allow the compensation claims of two wives for the death of Herbert L. Reynolds, 34, killed May 28 when a drill boat blew up on Dark Island Shoals, St. Lawrence river. The two who claimed they are Reynolds' widows are a Mrs. Herbert L. Reynolds of Alexandria Bay and a Mrs. Catherine Jean Dawley Reynolds of Burlington, Ont., Canada. Both have two children.

Troy, N. Y., July 5 (AP).—Stricken with heart attack last night in front of a hospital where he was going to visit a relative, Patrick J. Delaney, 65, former president of the Troy common council and widely known in baseball circles, died before medical assistance could be summoned.

Delaney was organizer of the P. J. Delaney Association, a semi-professional baseball club many years ago, and for 20 years was with the old Troy Gas Company.

Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER
WASHINGTON—With the machinery designed to bring about the economic recovery of the nation gradually beginning to function, the question now is being asked by observers in the capital as to what the government should do to pass on the constitution of various measures.

While the industrial recovery bill was before the senate, this phase of the measure came in for a lot of serious consideration. Borah of Idaho expressed great concern over the provision in the bill dealing with the Sherman anti-trust act. He and Wagner of New York, who engineered the bill through the senate, engaged in one of the liveliest debates in recent times on the subject.

Then, too, the prediction has been made that an often-heard republican campaign assertion in 1934 and 1936 will be that the President has put Congress and the constitution on the shelf.

If the issue is brought to a test, it will be the supreme court which must decide.

Straws in The Wind?

And in this connection, attention is being centered on a recent supreme court decision as a possible index to the tribunal's thought on this question.

It was a decision handed down on March 13 of this year in the case of the Appalachian Coal, Inc., vs. the United States. Chief Justice Hughes wrote the opinion and only Justice McReynolds dissented. Much may be heard of this decision in the future, for it deals largely with the point so often raised at the present on legislation enacted during the special session of Congress.

On October 17, 1932, a three-judge federal court, sitting in the western district of Virginia, held that the Appalachian Coal, Inc., and its 137 members proposed a selling corporation in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act, and prohibited the operation of the corporation along the lines planned.

The coal operators contended it was not their purpose in organizing the corporation to restrain trade, or to limit production, but merely to sell the coal produced.

The "deplorable condition of the coal industry" was cited and acknowledged by the lower court.

As Hughes Saw It

When the case was appealed to the supreme court, Chief Justice Hughes in his opinion reserved the decree of the lower court. And in doing so, he made this statement: "The restrictions of the act (Sherman) impose an artificial or artificial barrier to the free course of interstate commerce, but they do not seek to establish a more exclusive liberty either by making impossible the normal and fair expansion of that commerce or by the adoption of unreasonable measures to protect it from injurious and destructive practices and to promote competition upon a sound basis."

POLITICS at Random

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

WILL the much-advertised London economic negotiation turn out, after all, to be only "another conference," writing nothing in the book of history but great quantities of high-sounding, empty words?

Many indications point in that direction. The dispatches from London speak of "trials" and "collapses" in Washington a note of pessimism runs strongly through the "of the record" hints of public men.

Yet it never is safe in such matters to jump at conclusions.

The very uniformity of the outward show of pessimism at Washington is to some, a matter of suspicion. The attitude is notably in contrast with the usual "Polysian" predictions that each new conference heralds the millennium; there must be a reason for it somewhere.

Hard To Grasp

The one perfectly patent thing is that a very deep game of diplomacy is in progress—so deep that it would be a very brave man who really believed he could fully foretell the outcome.

Certainly the lay mind has been able to get very little out of the opening weeks of the conference.

The American viewpoint especially appears mysterious. The American delegates say things which look like commitments, and the next day deny that any such commitments were intended. Then they stand aside while non-delegate Moley, and non-delegate Davis, and non-delegate Sprague and other shrouded figures whirl in and out of the picture.

It is easy to conclude that the delegates do not know their business, have stubbed their toes badly, are utterly at sea. That is, it would be easier, except for one thing: Mr. Roosevelt says he is satisfied with the way things are going. What does he mean by that?

Those who know the President, and have stopped to analyze the situation, can have no remote belief that the American delegates are acting on their own. Mr. Roosevelt does not do business that way, particularly when he is dealing with a project of this caliber. His interest in the London conference is well established. His foreknowledge of the difficulties that would develop cannot be doubted in the light of his talks in Washington with the foreign executives.

The inescapable conclusion is that the President knows his own mind as to the American policy in London.

Turning Tables?

In most previous world conferences, the Americans have suffered in greater or less degree from over confidence and topped their heads at the outset.

The old world diplomats almost never do that. They are alert at letting matters slide to the edge of the precipice and then, by some dramatic stroke, gaining concessions they otherwise would have lost.

Is it just possible that Mr. Roosevelt is so to speak, giving during a dose of his own diplomatic medicine; that he has been content to confuse the situation as to his ultimate intent, just to show how necessary American leadership is and to make it the more welcome and the more decisive when it really is asserted?

The possibility is an extremely interesting one.

A DUM DRILL MASTER

A young corporal was drilling some men when one of them stepped out from the ranks and remarked in an angry voice: "You couldn't drill a company of ducks!"

Next morning he was brought before the colonel, who ordered him to be taken out and given ten minutes in which to change his mind.

When the time was up the man was brought in again and asked if he had altered his opinion. He replied in the affirmative, and was then asked: "And what conclusion have you come to?"

"That he could not drill one duck, sir," was the quick, if somewhat astonishing reply.—Montreal Herald.

"That's no use," replied Samba, doubtfully. "I know what a teller of untold lies I am."—Montreal Gazette.

"Little Stories for Bedtime" by Thornton W. Burgess

A REAL APPETITE

PETER RABBIT was provoked. He certainly was. Wasn't it enough to provoke anyone? There he had hunted in vain for Short-Tail in order to make a call, and then Short-Tail had suddenly appeared only to disappear quite as suddenly.

"That fellow doesn't know what common politeness is," grumbled Peter as he vainly started this way and that.

"Oh, yes, he does," replied a familiar sharp, squeaky voice, and Short-Tail the Shrew popped out from under some leaves. "I'm not impolite, but just busy. We hunters have to work for what we get to fill our stomachs. We can't sit down in one place and fill up the way you can."

"Are you a hunter?" exclaimed Peter, his eyes peeping right out with astonishment.

"Certainly! Of course! What did you suppose I was?" replied Short-Tail testily.

"I didn't think much about it," confessed Peter, "but I never in the world would have supposed you were a hunter. What do you hunt?"

"Anything that walks, crawls or flies, in the worm or insect line," replied Short-Tail, promptly, as he popped out from under a piece of bark with a fat beetle, which he proceeded to gobble as if he were half starved.

"Oh," said Peter, "I thought you meant that you hunted real folks, the same way Shadow the Weasel and Reddy Fox and all the rest of the hunters do."

"I do once in a while," replied Short-Tail, as the last of the beetle vanished. "If any young mice happen along you'll see whether or not I am a real hunter. They don't have to be so young either. I've killed more than one mouse bigger than I am. I'm ready for a fight with anybody my own size any time. But looking for bugs is just as much hunting as it is for Hooty the Owl to try to catch me. If you don't believe it, just you try to catch some of those big beetles."

"No, thank you," replied Peter, very promptly. "I'm quite willing to take your word for it and to leave them for you and Jimmy Skunk. I should think that one big beetle like the one you have just eaten would last you all day."

"Last me all day!" cried Short-Tail. "Why, that wasn't a bite. It would take a dozen like that to make me a meal and I have to have several meals a day. It is a bad day when I don't eat twice my own weight in food. You see anybody active as I am must have a lot of food to keep him going. I have to run about a great deal to find food enough, and the more I have to run about the more food I have to have to keep me going."

He disappeared before Peter could reply. "Twice his own weight in food in a day," muttered Peter. "He says he eats twice his own weight in a day. I thought I was some eater, but I guess I'm not. Twice his own weight in a day—pew!"

"That's nothing. Sometimes I eat three times my own weight when I'm lucky," squeaked Short-Tail, appearing in front of Peter as abruptly as he had disappeared. This time he had a snail.

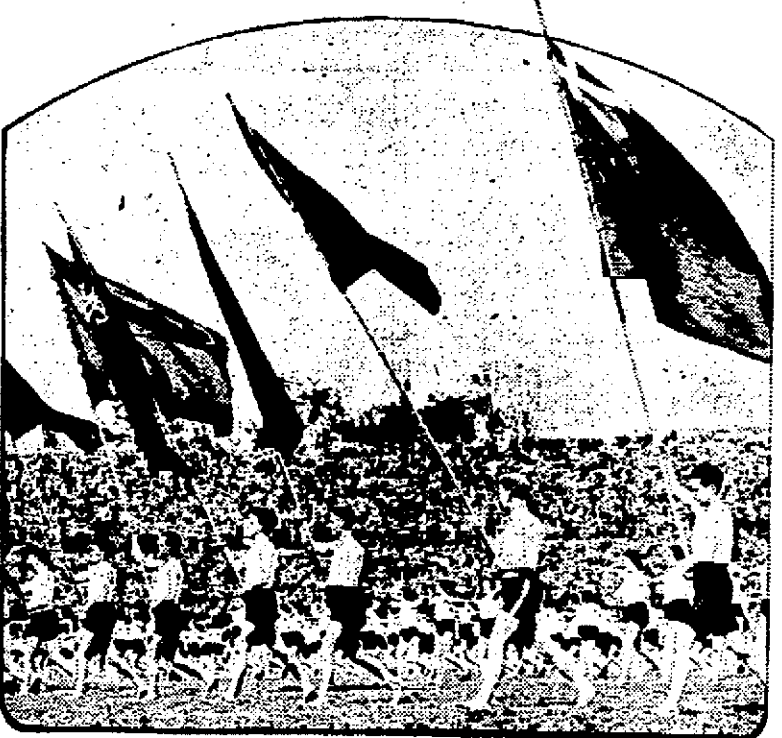

"Are you going to eat that?" asked Peter.

"Not now," replied Short-Tail. "I'd like to, but I guess I'd better put it away for next winter. Excuse me, please."

Short-Tail vanished with the snail. "My goodness, what an appetite!" exclaimed Peter, as he waited.

WHY Powder Is Wanted to Pay Honor to Officials

A recent Presidential proclamation increases the dignity of government by adding two more to their traditional titles when they visit army or navy posts in their honor, thereby raising them to the proud 19-gun status of cabinet members. This leads the National Geographic society to depart somewhat from its geographical researches, and to issue a bulletin about salutes. This bulletin began, the society finds, as an act of submission, which later evolved into a formal courtesy. Each side in international salutes (21 guns) is compelled by custom to waste an equal amount of gunpowder in returning the salute. Why 21 guns? The bulletin explains that seven was the original number in ship salutes, chosen for its supposed mystical properties. Shores forts returned three guns for one, since powder on shipboard was to be conserved. Later, when better powder was made, ship and shore took equal rank.

Delving into the matter a little further, we advance the theory that the salute stems from mankind's gregarious traits, and thus is a dignified and conventionalized form of greeting. It would be rather awkward, however, for a regiment of men to prostrate themselves before a governor, as the people of Siam do when meeting their king. It would be undignified for a cabinet member to be hailed by a battleship's crew with a cry of "Greetings, wild beast!" as the Basutos salute their chiefs, or even with our own genial "Hello" or "Good morning."

Nor would it be practical for the personnel of two fleets, meeting at sea, to indulge in handshakes all around, or to embrace one another, after the Continental fashion. Exchanging bows would be a futile and invariable gesture if conducted at a distance.

So, after dismissing other forms of greeting, gunfire remains the most practical and dignified. However, if the economy suggests ever attack that waste of powder, they might propose that colored flags be run up to serve the occasion.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Why Some Who's Whoes Are Not Whoes, in Doubt

Who's the who who chooses Who's Whoes?

The International "Who's Who" contains the names and summaries of the achievements of some 25,000 "celebrities."

Who chooses 'em? Who is it who omits Josef Stalin from the list of the world's great men and yet accords Paul Robeson, famous American negro singer, actor and athlete, a place in the book?

Robeson is entitled to his place, everyone will agree. But how about Stalin, dictator over the lives of more than 100,000,000 Russians?

And why is Leon Trotsky, another famous Communist, omitted? And why are scores of Indian princes whose name is insignificant—mentioned? And why are they accorded many columns of space when Mahatma Gandhi gets but ten lines?—Detroit News.

Why Dew Is Purest Water

The composition of rain water varies. Since rain is condensed water vapor it would be chemically pure if it did not gather foreign substances from the atmosphere as it falls to the earth. Rain water washes down out of the air, dust, soot, pollen, spores of fungi and similar material. It contains a percentage of dissolved oxygen, nitrogen, ammonia and carbonic acid gas. In falling through the impure atmosphere of cities it sometimes shows traces of nitric acid, sulphuric acid and other compounds. Snow is of similar composition, often with fewer impurities. Dew is the purest form of water in nature. Like rain it is distilled water, but lacking the impurities which rain picks up while falling through the air.

Why Free Service by Doctors?

Always the doctors have maintained the policy that no sick or injured person shall be denied medical services whether able or not to pay. We are still holding to the enjoyment of this unique privilege which is given to no other class. Does the public realize and appreciate that, daily, thousands of the sick are cared for at our free clinics and hospitals (which are mostly tax supported), and yet none of the physicians (who are really the important equation) receives pay? Try explaining to the wealthy patient why your fee is several times that charged by his chauffeur and note how gracefully he receives it.—Jackson County Medical Journal.

Why Dogs Howl, Doubtful

Whether howling in dogs is an expression of pain or an emotional response is not known. Yelping, instead of howling is the usual expression of pain in other circumstances, so perhaps the music does not cause the dog the discomfort that is sometimes imagined. Wolves, as well as some dogs, howl at the moon for no reason apparent to us.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Why It Is Called "Budget"

The word budget means a bag or pouch and was applied to the black leather bag in which the English chancellor of the exchequer carried his statements of accounts to the house of parliament. The term later was applied to the contents of the bag itself. To open the budget was a parliamentary term as early as the Seventeenth century.

Picturesque South American

Hippolito Irigoyen, earlier occupant of the presidential chair at Buenos Aires, was, during his incumbency, another of South America's picturesque executives. A scholar who read Greek for relaxation, he chummed by preference with bootblacks and longshoremen. He hated to sign his name and thus plunged his nation into many embarrassing situations by delaying important papers, among them authorizations to pay bills.

Many of the same cast are in this picture, including Ruby Keeler who was such a tremendous success in the other production. Ginger Rogers, Dick Powell and hundreds of others. Orpheum: "Pick Up" and "Come on Danger." George Raft and Sylvia Sydney form a new romantic team in this story of a taxi driver who "picks up" a girl on the streets and falls in love with her. Not only that, for the lady has a convict husband who has a jealous nature, and the taxi driver also falls under the spell of a society girl. Excitement and comedy mark this talkie. "Come on Danger" gives the middle-aged a chance to see that old dandy, Tom Keene, knock every thing down and out on his heroic march to the girl and glory. Roscoe Ates contributes some choice stutling.

Broadway: "Song of the Eagle." An up to the minute tale of 3.5 beer, gangsters, breweries and all. Charles Bickford, Richard Arlen, Mary Brian, Jean Hersholt, Louise Dresser, Andy Devine and George E. Stone are all important cast and with such a cast nothing but a good picture could result.

Talks to parents*Success And Failure

By ALICE JUDSON PEALE
Success and failure—the child's experience should include both, but far more of the former than of the latter.

For it is a well tested fact that children learn most rapidly through their successes, each success providing fresh incentive for further achievement. Repeated failures, on the other hand, act as a deterrent to effort, causing the child to become discouraged and uninterested.

There are some children, exceptionally gifted, exceptionally capable, and exceptionally fortunate in their opportunities, who seem to succeed in everything they attempt.

Such children tend to become arrogant and cocksure and, therefore, less attractive as personalities. Such children need, along with the recognition they win with so little effort, the spur of higher standards than obtain for the average. They need to be made aware of fields of endeavor in which they do not so readily outrank all others. Occasionally they need the salutary experience of making an unsuccessful effort.

On the other hand, there are children, either less gifted than the average or so handicapped with feelings of inferiority and emotional conflicts that they tend to fail far more often than they succeed. A vicious circle then easily becomes established in which failure leads to discouragement and discouragement to further failure.

Such children need especially protective guidance. They need to be steered to tasks and situations in which a measure of success is rather easily possible.

Such selected experience may be counted upon gradually to build up the child's self-confidence to a point where he will really be able to use his capabilities with maximum effectiveness.

SIGHTS and SOUNDS

By ROSS COONS

HOLLYWOOD—While a studio is casting about for a suitable Alice to send into a Wonderland of the talkies, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Norton are sitting still for England, a journey that for both of them is a sort of rehearsal.

As often happens in Hollywood, several studios became interested in Lewis Carroll's classic at the same time. For many years before, it seemed, the Edgar Nortons were the only people in England who cared. They not only were interested in the story, but they also owned the rights to the story and the rights to the name of Alice.

An Early Start
Edgar Norton's sentimental attachment to "Alice" began when he was a five-year-old boy in London. In the first production of the play he was the "March hare."

When Norton returned to the stage after school, it was not long before Richard Mansfield brought him to America. This was 30 years ago, and he has been here ever since, having become an American citizen. "I tried once," he reminisces, "to have a production of 'Alice' in New York, but the Gerry society stepped in and forbade it. After playing in a number of Broadway hits, I came into pictures in 1916. I thought of 'Alice' for the screen then, but I felt a good picture could not be made without the delightful Carroll. During that time I began purchasing the rights."

'Alice,' Always 'Alice'

For several years, while the talkie character actor who resembles Senator McAdoo was portraying screen butlers and prime ministers with dry humor and austerity, he and Mrs. Norton, who was now his agent, tried to sell "Alice."

"The results," he says, "were always disappointing. We interested many directors, and once a studio almost acted favorably. But they always decided that the story was only for children."

It was the stage that convinced Hollywood. Eva Le Gallienne's New York production and a revival in Pasadena brought out inquiries. Three studios planned to make the film, but the Nortons sold to Paramount.

"It's like an old dream come true," avers Norton, "just when I had given up hope."

There'll be back in September, before the film production begins.

Success And Failure
By ALICE JUDSON PEALE
Success and failure—the child's experience should include both, but far more of the former than of the latter.

For it is a well tested fact that children learn most rapidly through their successes, each success providing fresh incentive for further achievement. Repeated failures, on the other hand, act as a deterrent to effort, causing the child to become discouraged and uninterested.

There are some children, exceptionally gifted, exceptionally capable, and exceptionally fortunate in their opportunities, who seem to succeed in everything they attempt.

Such children tend to become arrogant and cocksure and, therefore, less attractive as personalities. Such children need, along with the recognition they win with so little effort, the spur of higher standards than obtain for the average. They need to be made aware of fields of endeavor in which they do not so readily outrank all others. Occasionally they need the salutary experience of making an unsuccessful effort.

On the other hand, there are children, either less gifted than the average or so handicapped with feelings of inferiority and emotional conflicts that they tend to fail far more often than they succeed. A vicious circle then easily becomes established in which failure leads to discouragement and discouragement to further failure.

Such children need especially protective guidance. They need to be steered to tasks and situations in which a measure of success is rather easily possible.

Such selected experience may be counted upon gradually to build up the child's self-confidence to a point where he will really be able to use his capabilities with maximum effectiveness.

Dairymen Defeat Gardeners; Huber Stars On Mound

A rally in the sixth inning, which netted the Clow Dairymen five runs, enabled them to trim St. Louis Gardeners, 4-1, in an upset at the Athletic Field Friday evening. The uprising broke up a pitchers' duel that was being waged between Nick Huber, curve ball artist of the Dairymen, and Willard Thomas of the Gardeners, with Huber having the better of the argument.

Huber led the Gardeners to two hits, one a scratch by Bill Schwab. The other hit was an honest to goodness triple by Hank Cragan. Huber deserved a shutout and would have had one if Hank Krum hadn't committed an error in the last inning to allow the only Gardener run.

Thomas held his own until the sixth inning. He allowed only three hits up to that time and had the Dairymen hitting the breeze throughout the contest, settling down to a total of seven hits.

Neither team was able to score until the fourth inning. Then the Dairymen scored one. Johnny Quest hit a double to right field and Hank Krum followed with one to the same field to send Quest home.

Thomas had a brief spell of wildness in the sixth inning and it started the Dairymen on their winning rally. Stumpf and Kreppel received walks and Hank Krum hit a hot one through the infield to send Stumpf in. Huber hit over Joyce's head to left field for a double and Kreppel and Krum registered. Feldmesser singled to right field and Ditzik hit another double to left to score Huber and Feldmesser.

Hank Cragan's triple paved the way to the Gardener's lone run. He dented the rubber when Krum let Cullum's grounder go through his legs.

SIDELINERS

It looked like the $5 bill donated by Bob Freer, of Freer's Tavern, was going to Ralph Williams when he hit a triple to right field. Fast fielding held him at third.

Umpire Joe Carr was unable to officiate due to an injury received in Thursday's game. Frank Murphy substituted for him.

The Dairymen finally broke into the win column after losing two close decisions.

There will be a meeting at the city hall Monday night of the managers and officers of the league.

Tagging Major League Bases

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)
More because of the St. Louis Cardinals' slump than through their own efforts, the Pittsburgh Pirates and Chicago Cubs were back on the edge of the National League battle today.

Neither has been impressive the past three weeks, the Cubs breaking even in 20 games and Chicago winning nine and losing eleven, but as they settled down for a long home stay, Pittsburgh was only a half game out of second place and the Cubs, victorious over the league leading New York Giants yesterday, were a game further back. Pittsburgh was idle but opens against the Phillies today.

The Cubs whipped Bill Terry's club 6 to 5 in a ten inning duel. They spotted the Giants five runs when the latter rapped Pat Malone and Lynn Nelson for six hits and all their failures in the third, then tied the score on Mark Koenig's pinch homer in the eighth and won out in the tenth on an error by Travis Jackson with the bases filled.

Dodgers Victorious.
The Brooklyn Dodgers meanwhile gave the Cardinals a lacing, 10 to 4, to leave the Giants 5½ games in front. Tex Carleton, who pitched 16 innings Sunday, gave up five runs in four innings.

Cincinnati's Reds slammed out an 8-5 victory over the Boston Braves. The whole Cincinnati team aided in piling up a 14 hit total, and it took just two innings to settle the game as the Reds scored seven runs.

Yanks Defeated.
The Detroit Tigers advanced to fifth place in the American League by defeating the New York Yankees 9 to 4. The Tigers discounted Babe Ruth's 19th homer of the season by clouting Charley Ruffing and Don Brennan for nine of their 12 hits in four big innings.

Coming back to Shibe Park, three former Philadelphians, Mule Haas, Al Simmons and Jimmy Dykes, led the Chicago White Sox to a 9-1 victory over the Athletics behind Eddie Durham's six hit flinging. Haas hit four singles while the other two contributed a homer apiece.

The four other American League teams were idle.

Yesterday's STARS

(By The Associated Press)
Ernie Lombardi, Reds—Drove in four runs against Braves with homer and double.
Marvin Owen and Ray Hayworth, Tigers—Rapped Yankee pitching for four hits each.
Mark Koenig, Cubs—Hit pinch homer with two on in eighth against Giants.
Eddie Durham, White Sox—Limited Athletics to six hits.
Tony Cuccinello, Dodgers—Hit double and two singles, knocked in three runs, against Cardinals.

Canzoneri, Ross Rematched Again

Tony Canzoneri of New York and Marlborough, who lost his lightweight title to Barney Ross of Chicago a fortnight ago, will try to reclaim it in a match with Ross at the Polo Grounds in New York, September 12. Contracts were signed yesterday for the match which is to go 15 rounds.

Tim Mara, promoter of the Canzoneri-Ross go, has announced that he would match the winner of the Ben Joby-Young Torrey middleweight title fight at Dreamland Park in Newark, Monday, with Lou Broilard, victor over Mickey Walker in Boston Thursday. Broilard will engage in the championship battle at the Yankee Stadium on July 26.

Despite the setback to Walker, the Madison Square Garden Corporation incurs going through with the contemplated Walker-Maxie Rosenbloom light-heavyweight championship match at the Garden on July 26. It also has been revealed that Jack Sharkey would engage in four fights under the Garden promotion in the latter part of the year.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. COULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor.)
Al Librickson probably didn't have the slightest idea he would stir up an argument among his friends when he suggested, in a signed feature story for The Associated Press, that Washington, Yale, California and Harvard would finish in that order in the finals of the intercollegiate eight-oared regatta at Long Beach on July 8.

All Washington Huskies should win the big race, but no one old grad to another, may not suggest to him that he not under-rate the Cornell crew that Jim Wray is taking with the Yale and the Princeton to represent the old rowing "Big Three" of the East?

In the first place, Yale, while winner of all its early season races at the so-called "sprat" distances, up to two miles, did not dominate them. The Yale was lucky to beat Pennsylvania and they were pressed by a Cornell variety crew that developed slowly. Harvard will be good, but hardly formidable with six "javee" coxswains and two freshmen making up the Crimson entry for the Pacific Coast races.

Meanwhile Wray has quietly put together a first-rate sprint combination at Ithaca. He has had plenty of time to do some experimenting, with a definite objective in mind. In short he has a crew that will do close to 6:30 for the 2,000 meters and give any of its five rivals a race from start to finish.

Young And Healthy

Those who like to argue over the relative strength or ability of the sexes in golf may consider this item from the dispatches of the British Press Association:

"A mighty drive of three hundred and ten yards by Miss Meg Farquhar, the only woman competitor, created a sensation in the Scottish Professional Championship on the Moray course here today. At the ninth hole Miss Farquhar's tee shot reached the green, a terrific hit for a girl of twenty-one, and the spectators gave her a cheer."

Miss Farquhar is the daughter of a Moray Firth owner of a herring drifter, and her appearance suggests that she is strong and hardy, with the fresh complexion of the Scottish fisher lassies.

Collegiate

The Yankees may not be definitely committed to a policy of up-lifting the educational standards of the big leagues, but they have made rapid strides this year in enlisting college talent under their far-flung banners.

They signed Yale's star pitcher, Johnny Broaca, after engaging Charlie Devens of Harvard and assigning him to the Newark Bears for a year's seasoning. Jimmy Hitchcock, Auburn's All-America halfback and baseball shortstop, is the latest to cast his lot with the Yankee forces.

Columbia Lou Gehrig is, of course, the chief example of what a college degree can do for a ball-player with the Yankees. The headquarters roll also includes Joe Sewell of the University of Alabama Sewells and Dr. Eddie Farrell, the Pennsylvania dental alumnus. Over in Newark, Red Rolfe of Dartmouth is being groomed to take his place some day in the Yankee infield. Southern California is represented for a time by Jesse Hill, but this broad-jumper is now with St. Paul.

No Game Sunday At Fair Grounds

The Kingston All Stars have no game booked for Sunday at the Kingston Fair Grounds but will go to Saugerties to play against Saugerties A. C. in a contest that is expected to be a gingery affair, witnessed by a record crowd. In this match the All Stars will represent the Davi All Stars of Glasco.

It is the hope of the Stars to win in order to fortify themselves for their big game at the Fair Grounds, Tuesday evening, July 11, with Chief Bender's House of David team from Benton Harbor, Mich.

Friday evening, July 14, the All Stars will play Judge Harry Schrick's old Colonials. City Judge Bernard A. Calloton is to pitch for the veterans and Jack Robins will catch. Others on the roster are Jimmy Morgan, Bill Schwab, Dutch Glaser, Kid Moore, Leo Fitzgerald, Bill McAniffe, Bobby Corle, Matty Deegan and Harold Johnson. Artie Rice, one of Ulster county's best known ball players, will be active manager of the old timers' club.

BILLIARDS

Class B' billiard tournament results at Nick's Friday were as follows:
Johnny Whitaker 100, Al Buchanan 99.
High runs—Whitaker 12, Buchanan 9.
Johnny Cave 100, Ed Cunningham 82.
High runs—Cave 10, Cunningham 9.

Noisy Fish

Although most fishes are dumb there are others which have peculiar methods of producing sounds. The trigger fish of Mauritius makes a drumming by striking its air-bladder with its fin. The stickleback behaves something like a grasshopper, rubbing its fins against its back to make a noise. Horse mackerel have a noisy habit of grinding their teeth.

Diagnoses and Plans

Diagnoses, paying Plato a visit, told on his rich carpets with his dirty feet. "See," said he, "how I trample on the pride of Plato." "True," said Plato, "but with that greater pride which spot beauty."

Swimming Lesson

By William J. Brooks
This is the second of a series of articles on swimming by William J. Brooks, Swimming Instructor, Williams Lake Beach, Haverhill, N. Y.

The Breast Stroke

In the breast stroke, the best stroke for beginners, the body is kept continually on the breast, with the shoulders on a line with the surface of the water. This position can be secured by stooping in the water up to the neck and taking a gliding push-off with the arms stretched forward. When doing this, the hands must be turned outward, bringing the arms backward to a point approximately on right angles with the body and on a straight line with the shoulders. Then bend the arms at the elbow, bringing the hands inward until the finger tips touch. With this last mentioned movement, draw the knees up side ways, kick the heels together, and slightly point the toes outward, to create a frog kick.

The completion of the stroke is reached by shooting the arms out forward while the legs, as mentioned above, stretch outward and back until the body is again in the original starting position. The start and finish of the stroke are alike, and the position at both start and finish should be out in the push-off gliding position, connecting each stroke.

The next point to learn in breast stroking is how to swim it correctly over a greater number of yards. Breathing is what makes it easy. The breathing in this stroke should be done by the simple method which was explained in my previous article—inhalation through the mouth and exhalation through the nose. Inhale through the mouth while the arms are grasping the water in the backward pull. Hold your breath with the mouth closed, as the legs are being drawn up. Then exhale through the nose while the kick is being pushed forward.

One must practice this stroke continually with the proper timing of this breathing instruction to secure relaxing perfection. The stroke with the breathing, inhale and exhale, can be practiced as a land drill before going into the water. Merely submerge the face in a basin of water and follow the above breathing instructions. The purpose of land drills in all swimming stroke motions is to enable the beginner to be more mentally alert in the water as well as to secure rhythm of the arms.

After this elementary land practice and study of the stroke, the only difficulty there will be is that the body might at first be too low in the water to breathe freely. This at first conquers most timid beginners, but it can be easily overcome by a downward pressure on the backward pull, serving to lift the body high in the water, therefore making ample time and room to breathe in the stroke.

For the benefit of those who desire to start with the crawl stroke instead of the above breast stroke, my article to follow will contain complete instructions for the beginner learning the crawl.

Fleischmanns at Port Ewen Sunday

Fleischmanns, the only team that defeated Port Ewen so far this summer, is scheduled to meet the Firemen again Sunday in a game at Hercules Field, Port Ewen. Indications are that the battle will be well attended, and that there will be action galore. Port Ewen hopes to even up with the Mountaineers, who contend that they can make it two straight over the boys from across the creek.

One reason for the firemen's thinking they can beat the Fleischmanns nine this time is because of their 4-0 victory over the Connolly A. C. July 4 at St. Remy. The Port Eweners and Connolly will meet again on Sunday, July 22. In answer to Manager Sam Barnett's charge that Connolly was not credited with enough base hits on July 4, Port Ewen says: "They have to get the hits before we can count them. We'll give them another shelling on July 22."

"Michigan Bridget"

WOMEN have been led to take up the masculine pursuit of warfare by various reasons, patriotic and sentimental. But it is probable that few of them took up arms, as did Bridget Devens, for the love of fighting. For Bridget, when the Civil war was over, chose not to return to the quiet routine of home and children, but with her husband re-enlisted in the regular army, went with her regiment to Texas and was for a time stationed near the Rocky mountains.

Mrs. Devens is known in history as "Michigan Bridget" from the fact that it was with the First Michigan cavalry regiment, in which her husband was a private, that she first went into battle, and many and various are the tales of her valor. A robust Irish woman, she rode horseback day and night, on one particular march it is said wearing out several horses, keeping up with the best of her fellow soldiers during Sheridan's famous marches in the Shenandoah valley, and more than once she took the place left by a wounded man in the firing line.

During one ill-fated engagement the captain of Bridget's regiment was killed and a colonel badly wounded. It was Bridget who accompanied the wounded man to City Point hospital and tended him four days and nights without sleep, until he was well on his way to recovery. Then, indignant that her captain's body had been left on "rebel soil," after a single night's sleep and accompanied only by an orderly, she again took to horse to go after it. It was a hard ride of fifteen miles. Once at the battlefield, however, the tireless woman found the body, strapped it to her horse and continued on her way, riding seven miles to City Point, where she had the body embalmed and saw that it was properly shipped home.

But Bridget was not yet finished. On the field of battle she had seen a number of wounded soldiers left without care. Once more she returned. With prodigious effort she got eight of the wounded men into a wagon, and with her sorry load started once more for City Point. Half way there, she ran into a detachment of Southern scouts. They ordered her to halt, that they might investigate. Lashing her horses, Bridget kept on her way. The Confederate leader shouted after her, then ordered his men to fire. But for the timely intervention of a small body of Northern troops, this escape might have put an end to Bridget's military career, and to her life as well. As it was, she got her wounded to the hospital, and was able to save the lives of a number of them.

FABLE OF THE FOUR MERCENARY MINXES

By GEORGE ADE

ONCE in the dim days, gone beyond recall, when parents were not compelled to take out licenses, there lived in an E. Flat Town on the O and A. H. a Quartette of Nymphs who had their Pick of all the Valentines between Padgett's Siding and Sunset Ridge. To look at the old photographs of them, one might suspect that they were related to the Hopkins, but it must be remembered that in the dead Nineties, when every Dorothy was lanced across the brow and had a New England Bolled Dinner sewed on to her wide Hat, the most ravishing Specimen of the only attractive Sex looked as if she had been dipped in something and then dried in the Sun.

Now these fair Vixens were Named Lib and Min and Stet and Jess, and it is of interest to note that away back, nearly 25 Years ago, before the World had been reformed into its present deplorable Fix, these Maidens Mept with one Eye open, kept Tab on the Opposite Gender and, in a General Way, looked out for Number one and the Blue Ticket.

A good many Weepers will tell you that previous to 1910, when a Nice Girl was supposed to Faint if anyone saw her Ankles, every Marriage had a Background of True Love and every Deb went looking for Nobility of Character instead of an AAL Rating at the Commercial Agency. If the Truth must come out, full many a cold Calculation was made beneath a Poke Bonnet.

Werent' Too Ambitious.

Cleopatra knew how to put a Crimp in a Check Book. When Solomon began giving Presents to the Queen of Sheba she never begged him to stop because she was afraid he could not afford it. Going a little further back, the fuzzy Gentleman who wore a Leopard Skin, and, naught else, always had the inside Track if his Cave was stocked with fresh Pterodactyl Meat. And, checking up on those Relatives, can we not be certain that the gimp and enterprising Ape who climbed the highest Palms and brought down the milkiest Nuts was the White-Haired Papa of the Jungle?

When the four Dulceness out at Musselwhite began to look around for Feathers that could be used in a Nest, they were simply running true to form. Of course it was a Tap Era and a Dollar would go a long Distance, whereas now it seems muscle-bound. The Village Belle who was getting ready to take a Buggy Ride could hardly sleep a Wink the Night before and at a Musical Offering the Folks in the Back Rows would stand up to get a Peek at the new Triumph of Man's Ingenuity called the Saxophone.

The four conniving Cuties were not looking for Millionaires. It was no use trying to creep up on Something that wasn't there. Each of them merely wanted a Home with a Front Yard to it and a Hired Girl and the kind of Duds that would go with a Silk Parasol.

They were real Chums and used to visit One Another and lie awake far into the Night discussing their foxy Plans for landing and stringing some Live Ones. It will ever be a Question in picking out the Envelope supposed to contain the Pay Check, whether it is wiser to spread the Bait for John who already has Currency in the Mitt or troll for a hard Worker who owns a set of Tools.

Lib was the first to take the High Jump. After burning up many a ton of Anthracite Coal to keep the Front Room warm through the Long Winter Evenings, and holding Hands until her Fingers were Blue, she finally picked out a large slow-moving Pachyderm with the very attractive Name of Wes. She pinned the Ribbon on him because he had just come into 100 acres of good Land. Other Improvements on the Same included a House with Scroll-Work around the Eaves and $800 worth of Lightning Rods on the Barn.

Lib No Piker. Anyone who expects to live on the Income from a Quarter Section should be ready for a Diet of Rainwater and Crackers. The net on that much Land, after paying Taxes and making Improvements and Repairs, would not keep the average Family in Blueing. Furthermore, any time Congress gets too busy trying to do something for the Farmer by mere use of the Vocal Cords, any good Fertile Tract is apt to be a Liability instead of an Asset.

Wes thought he was rich but he was sitting on the Front Stoop of the Poor House. One cannot obtain actual Money from a Farm except by plastering a Mortgage, and any Gentleman who lives in Town and wears a White Shirt with a Granite Button and devotes the life-long day to Checkers and Criticism of the Government, has a Fat Chance of battling his Way out from under an Incumbrance.

Everyone said that Wes was smart enough not to ever showed any Ambition, Initiative and deadly Resolution except when he was in a Pool Game. Everything was Jake and rosy with the Couple as long as they could borrow on the Real Estate, but now the Farm belongs to the Hired Hand and Wes is Floor Walker in a Grocery store.

Where to Feed Birds. Swale or swamp borders, weed patches, brushy fence rows and the protected sides of woodlots or ravines are good places to place food for game birds in the wintertime. Grain put under dense clumps of evergreens or at the windward bases of large trees usually will be available to the birds, even after considerable snowfall.

Stone, with Lib Bakes Cakes for Parties.

Just to show you that there is nothing in Logic, it may be related that Min fell into the arms of the after making sure that his Share of the Estate would be about $5000. Well, the Wix who ran a Tooth-pick into a Lumber Yard and Mr. Hezate, starting with only one Pickle, were timed Pickers compared to or with Lib. He took his little Monk of Deagh up to the City and made a First payment on some North Shore property and then sold enough Lots to pay for the Land and had over $5000 left, which in some figuring, so matter what you say. He and Min now spend most of their time in Travel and are scared pick all the while that some one will sneak the Jewel case containing $125,000 worth of Gems Suitable for a large Lady who never had Silk next to the Skin until she was 30 years of age. They are very unhappy.

George B. Shaw must have stood up the Human Menagerie through many Years before he invented that startling Catch Phrase, "You Never Can Tell." When Stet threw herself away on Silent St who worked at the Grain Elevator, it was the Verdict for Miles around that she had been guilty of a prize Bower. Because he said little, most of the Town Folk thought he was a Dumbfuddle.

Ball of Fire Upsets the Dope. It was not generally understood in Musselwhite that anyone ever cut out Idle Chatter so as to devote more time to Thinking. Stet had been keeping Cases on him and she figured that he was doing something with the Bean besides using it as a support for a Derby Hat, so she crossed her Fingers and took the big Gamble.

It is now a matter of History that St became such an Expert Accountant that finally he owned the Elevator and then began to touch up the Market Wire and finally moved right into Chicago and became one of the most audacious, unscrupulous and nifty Hounds that ever wore hornrimmed Glasses and dealt from the Bottom of the Deck.

They are very proud of him, back in the Old Home Town, and will tell you that Stet and he live in a very exclusive and restricted District which bars out Colored People and Apartment Houses. They have a Japanese Servant and both have been to the Mayo Institute, then which nothing could be more so.

If any of the Locals ever raise a Question as to how he acquired the princely Bank Roll, some one speaks up and asks, "Well, he's got it, ain't he?" What more could be said even though Chapters were devoted to the subject.

It was the candid Opinion of the Wise Men of Main Street, back in the Glorious Days of Free Silver, that J. Percival Trigwilt was the coolest and cleverest kit of the whole gosh-blame Kit. No matter what anyone said to him he was right there with a snappy Come-Back. Keener than mustard and nothing got past him except Lightning. When Jess fell for Percie it was agreed that she had a little Ball of Fire who would cut some Steak.

He is now putting out One-Sheets for the Movie Theater but he is still very good at Repartee when anyone duns him. Possibly the J. Percival has held him back all these Years but Jess still has Confidence in him because when it comes to delivering Laundry Work after she gets it all done up, he is absolutely Trustworthy and always knows where he can borrow a Wheelbarrow.

Moral: After talking with the Neighbors and consulting a Fortune Teller, go ahead and use your own judgment.

Collector Profits by Odd Philatelic Error

A philatelic error in a million, the printing of the king's head on both sides of a sheet of 45 halfpenny stamps, has aroused the interest of collectors in every part of England and has sent them scurrying to post offices in the hope of finding another. The stamps were issued to a London suburban post office and six of them were sold before the error was discovered.

The purchaser of the seventh, however, was a lucky collector, who, realizing that he had chanced on an error unique in the history of his hobby, promptly bought up the remaining 38.

They are estimated to be worth £50 in all and are now in the possession of E. D. Bowie, a London stamp dealer. In commenting on the error, Mr. Bowie said that the value of the six stamps which were used and which might be anywhere in the world, could not be estimated. "Naturally," he added, "the search for them will be world-wide."

The same error occurred in 1881 in the printing of the one-penny Black Scotts No. 80, which is now catalogued at $75.
